Writing

Advising with SHOULD

The most helpful advice is possible to follow. In the 3 paragraphs below the recommendations are doable by Musa or any other driver.

- Record all the firm advice that drivers can actually follow from these three paragraphs. Use the table on the next page to record the advice. A few examples have been done for you.

- Notice the form of each positive and negative verb that follows SHOULD. There are no suffixes such as -ed or -ing. There is no preposition such as TO between the modal and main verbs.

> Paragraph 1
>
> The first recommendation is that Musa should not text while he is driving. Second, he should look ahead at the road. Third, he should place both hands on the steering wheel. Fourth, he should not wear his watch on his right wrist. Finally, he should keep his eyes on the road.

> Paragraph 2
>
> One of the dangers on country roads is wildlife. Drivers should look out for moose. Crashing into one of these large animals can damage a car or injure a person. Another danger is unmarked lanes. Lane lines are yellow or white. Drivers shouldn't drive in the middle of the road. They should stay to the right. Drivers may run into danger when they aren't familiar with the signs. They shouldn't speed. It's a good idea to slow down at all corners.

> Example Paragraph
>
> Drivers should avoid distractions while they are driving. They should keep their eyes on the road. They should control the steering wheel with both hands. They should not text while driving. To avoid being distracted, drivers could turn off their cellphones. They might put their cellphones out of reach.

Paragraph 1		Paragraph 2		Example Paragraph
Positive	Negative	Positive	Negative	Positive	Negative
should look	should not text	should look out	shouldn't drive

In the Community
An Intermediate Integrated Skills Textbook
Chapter 4

© NorQuest College